

WORK welcomes the submission of Case Study Reports

Case Study Reports are composed of novel or complex case examples encountered in the area of work. The focus can be on a client, a family, a community, an institution, or any other defined unit. Alternatively, the focus can be on an event, trend, initiative or project.

- Length
8-10 pages, not including abstract.
- Language
Written in third person, past tense, active voice.
- References Incorporated into the body of the case study, i.e., numbered in the text, with a reference list at the end. The reference style for WORK is Vancouver style or Endnote/Vancouver style.
- Page 1: Title page (title of case study report, author(s) name, address, telephone/fax/e-mail and corresponding author)
- Page 2: Abstract
Write a one-paragraph abstract of not more than 150 words including a 1- to 2-sentence description of the case(s) and setting.
- Introduction
Briefly review pertinent literature concerning the disease, disorder, or challenge(s) faced by the client, the family, the community, the institution or any other defined unit. State the purpose of your case study and its significance to work.
- Case History
Provide pertinent demographic information on the client, the family, the community, the institution or any other defined unit. Provide a detailed description of the case, in chronologic order.
- Photographs, charts, artwork or any other supporting material that would enhance the presentation of the case study, are strongly encouraged. Ensure that there is no client, family, community, institution or any other defined unit or product identity (product-neutral).
- Discussion
Review and focus on pertinent literature regarding the intervention(s), event, trend, initiative or project. Focus on evidence-based interventions.
- Summary
Summarize the most salient points of this case in a single paragraph.

- References
